Part 2 雅思考官 8 分范文展示

An interesting novel or story

Many years ago, perhaps when I was just 12 or 13 years old I read a book called; 'With the sun on my back'. I would read this book while laying on my bed, usually after I had done my homework, and just before going to sleep.

Essentially, the preface told me it was a true story, a life of hardship, adventure, change and abundance. The story was about the life of a young man from the north of England. He was living a life of hardship as a coal miner at just 14 years of age, and he dreamed of more than his dirt-poor existence. By boat, he traveled from England to Australia, where he found work on a cattle station. It was here that the adventure of his life took place, his love and his later wealth as a cattle station owner which began in The Outback of New South Wales.

Frankly speaking, I was absolutely captivated by this book, I couldn't put it down! I read it cover to cover at least twice because I enjoyed it so much. However, I tended to race through the pages, forgetting the important details of the struggles and victories this man suffered and won, hence the re-reading. I actually had my school atlas open to New South Wales and plotted his story and looked online for photos of the town Canowindra in Australia.

Part 3 雅思考官 8 分范文展示

Sport 相关的 part 3

常见话题卡: An exciting sport you know about; Some physical exercise that you frequently do; A sport you like doing; A sports person who did very well at an event

1. Do you think governments should regulate dangerous sports?

I think it is necessary to regulate dangerous sports to a certain degree. Take bungee jumping for example, the government should take action to make sure the facilities offered to people are in good condition and the providers are professional enough. However, as I see it, restricting dangerous sports is not right because people have the freedom to seek adventure.

2. Which is more important for one to become a top sportsperson, training or natural ability?

As I see it, training is more important. I'm not saying that natural ability doesn't matter. Just that many sportspersons who are unknown at very first finally awe spectators successfully. Their secret is training hard and wisely.

3. Why do some professional sportspeople have great status in and influence on their society?

It is primarily because every society has tons of sports buffs. It is necessary that fans should be influenced by their icons. Furthermore, there are chances that people who are not sports buffs also admire professional sportspeople because of their spirit, you know, the sportsmanship, such as fairness, self-control, courage, and persistence. Therefore, they can be influenced by sportspeople
